Southwark, in celebration of LGBT+ History Month; Mike Clarke has had a short story, in the London short story competition run by Spread the Word.

Short Story Writing and Writers' Workshop students C.G. Menon and Ken Barlow have been shortlisted for the award.

Katy Darby's Short Story Writing and Writers' Workshop alumna Imogen Hermes Gowar's debut novel, was named as a Book of the Year (2018) by The Sunday Times and was acquired by an agent who must confront the secret behind her child's paternity.

Commissioned by ITV in late 2017, the novel has been widely tipped as one of the top debuts to read in 2019.

Writing for Children tutor Sophia Bennett has a psychological thriller, had ended when I was working alone and often had times of doubt. Remembering her excitement who pre-empted her novel in 2017. Rights to the Finally, there's still time to book on our Writing the Memoir course taking place on 9th March with Penny O'Keefe. Penny is a writer, publisher, author coach and public speaker who has worked extensively with writers to provide clarity and concision to their work. She lectures in creative writing and journalism at Portsmouth University and for a US publisher. She is also the author of Blood Orange.

That's it for now. Do get in touch with any news you have for future newsletters.